

A school's year

A CBSE school of 800 in Hyderabad, moving off MyClassBoard. Every screen named is in the product today.

March, the week before The correspondent opens Getting started. Move from MyClassBoard lists five files in order: classes, students with parents, staff, fee structures, this year's receipts. The office downloads each from MCB, dry-runs it, fixes the eleven rows it names, imports. Parents get their logins from the same file. Receipt numbers stay as MCB printed them, so dues are right on day one. Rules is three sentences: remind families five days before a fee is due by WhatsApp, send the office the day's figures at six, nothing after nine at night. Returns readiness says 34 fields are missing for UDISE+ and names the screens; the office starts there, not in September.

April Admissions

A family taps an enquiry link on the school's WhatsApp status and fills it in on their phone. It lands under Enquiries with a counsellor as owner and a follow-up date. The campus visit is booked, the walk-in logged at the front desk with a pass, the application form built once in the form builder, documents verified against the list. A sibling already on the roll is matched. The RTE lottery list is imported and the seats filled. The waitlist moves on its own when a seat opens. Dropped leads carry a reason; the counsellor's daily sheet shows who was not called.

June The year starts

Year rollover promotes every section. Class setup, teacher assignment, the master timetable with substitutions, bell schedules, the calendar and holidays. The demand run raises the term's invoices and the first reminder goes out on schedule. Transport allocates each child to a stop with a zone; vehicle papers are checked against their expiry dates; the daily transport sheet prints at seven.

A Tuesday in July, 8:40 The morning

The gate reader marks staff. One teacher forgot to punch and asks on My leave for the day to be fixed; HR approves on the Staff register and the mark is written. At 9:05 class teachers take attendance on their phones, offline in the two classrooms with no signal, synced when they walk out. By 9:30 the parent of every absent child has a message. A parent applies leave for Friday in the app; it is in the register before the teacher reaches it. A teacher posts three photos from the science fair as a Class Status story; the family gallery fills by lunch.

Tuesday The office

The fee counter takes cash, a cheque dated next week and a UPI payment; each prints an A4 receipt at once and posts to the books by itself. The cheque sits on the cheque deposit dashboard until it clears. The accountant prints the bank pay-in slip. One receipt was taken against the wrong sibling; Fee corrections moves it with the reason on the record. The canteen terminal sells lunch coupons. A vendor bill goes to petty cash. The nurse logs an infirmary visit, the counsellor a family conversation.

Tuesday The staff room

Homework goes into the diary once and reaches every parent by evening. Lesson plans and syllabus progress are updated. The HOD hands a teacher a task with a due date; it shows under My tasks. A permission for two hours at the bank is applied for and approved by the reporting manager. The new handbook policy on phones in class is read and acknowledged; HR sees who has not signed.

September Exams	Question papers are set, sent for approval, moderated. Hall tickets and seating are issued for a whole section. Marks are entered, absentees flagged, report cards generated in the board's format and published to families. Achievement certificates for sports day are issued for the whole section in one press.
October Month end	Monthly payroll runs with loss of pay taken from the register, PF and ESI grouped, payslips published, the bank file downloaded. The daybook, cashbook, ledger and trial balance close the month; the GST and taxation sheet is ready for the auditor. Outstanding as at 30 September prints class by class and will not change when October's money comes in. The month-wise statement and the deposits register reach the correspondent in the evening digest.
November The returns	Returns readiness is down to four missing fields. UDISE+ syncs. APAAR IDs are provisioned, DigiLocker certificates issued. Staff training hours are checked against CBSE's fifty. The board LOC is validated and filed. Nothing is scrambled for.
January The buses	A bus runs late; parents at the next three stops are alerted when it enters the geofence, and the transport office watches it on the live map, which draws from the public basemap when the school's own tiles are down. A speeding alert goes to the manager. A permit that expires next month is already on the transport home.
February The people	Performance reviews run on the yearly cycle. A teacher resigns; the exit runs through department clearances and the settlement unlocks when the last one signs. The library runs its annual stock check, and reading levels show which children in Class 3 read below the band.
March Year end	Transfer certificates for the leaving batch are issued in bulk, skipping the two children who owe fees and naming them. Promotion certificates follow. The year closes in the books. The trustee opens Where the money goes and sees the year on one page.
Every day Underneath	Twenty roles each open to their own home. A grievance goes to the right person with a deadline. Circulars carry acknowledgements. The seller console watches every school's health and support queue; Quick Assist lets support see a screen with a six-digit code. The school's own colour and logo are on every screen and print.
